Jingi: He's fishing with a lazy look.

Ah... I can't understand it. I wonder if the fish are taking a nap... it's like I can't fish.

He raises the rod once. He swing the rod again.

I'm sure it's good weather. It seems that tomorrow will be sunny.

It's been a long time since I went to the mainland. I wonder if he's getting big.

How well will he remember this island?

Uh, so he graduated from high school, so he's 15 now?

I mean, when he left, was he five years old or something?

It's suspicious, he probably doesn't even remember me. Well, it's been ten years.

He has been all alone for ten years...

Even the teacher has done cruel things.

Well, that would be interesting, but...

Tomorrow...

I wonder if he'll get used to the island... Well, even if it's not right away, as long as I'm here, I'll manage somehow. That's right, well...

Not much more... just a little more... Yes.

When that time comes... I'm looking forward to you, Yukito.

Until the end, let's have fun.
