

MEMORY STORIES: ON A COLD DAY

TRANSLATION: NARU-KUN / K-PROJECT WORLD

One winter day three bad things happened.

One is that Tokyo was hit by a rare cold snap in the history of observation. Even around Shizume, the snow cover exceeded 20 cm and the transportation network was completely paralyzed. People were isolated in each home and could not come and go.

The second is that the HOMRA bar was without power that night. They could not travel by car, he called the electric company and they told him that it could not be repaired due to heavy snowfall. Looking at the surroundings through the frozen glass of the window, the area was completely black. Apparently the electricity supply had been lost all over the place.

And finally, Anna Kushina had a high fever.

She was fine until noon, but suddenly her complexion turned pale and her breathing became rough at night. When he took her body temperature, she was close to 39 degrees. The consultation time at the nearest hospital had already passed, and it was difficult to move due to the heavy snowfall.

"I just caught a cold."

She smiled and retired to her room, but Kusanagi...

"If the fever keeps going up, even at night, we'll take her to the emergency hospital, okay?"

Saying that, the men who were there happily responded.

"Leave it to me. If it's Anna, I can bring four or five people together!"

Especially Kamamoto, who struck his chest with the impression of being a plow moving through heavy snow, was reliable.

Fortunately, that day, there were Kusanagi, Totsuka, Yata, Kamamoto and a lot of manpower.

They collected the lanterns and candles from the store, made a midnight snack, and looked after Anna. Blankets were brought into her room, given a midnight snack, and the men took turns leaving.

"Anna, are you okay? Tell me if you want me to buy something. I'll run to get it."

Yata said uneasily.

"Anna, I'll leave the flashlight here. Well, I'm glad I had an outdoor hobby right now."

Totsuka's methods were ancient, but they installed a flashlight next to Anna's bed that cast a solid light around her.

"Anna, I brought porridge with milk, apples and honey and ginger tea made by Kusanagi-san. Do you want to eat?"

Kamamoto asked him to put food that seemed to be good for her digestive system on the tray and to take care of her. In the end, Kusanagi...

"Look, I know how you feel, but when you walk in and out, Anna should rest. You're off limits for a while. Anna, don't hesitate to call me. We're awake all the time."

He chases away the guys who wanted to show up.

Anna smiled and laughed. She was happy with the feelings of Kusanagi, Totsuka, Yata and Kamamoto. Anxiety came to her, and her body was aching, but her heart was hot. Anna asked something, since she was only interested in one point.

"Izumo. What about Mikoto?"

Kusanagi said...

"Uh..."

He had a worried face.

"I can't get in touch with him."

Suoh Mikoto went out for a drink last night and he still hadn't come home. He wasn't worried because it was quite common for him not to return for a couple of days, but maybe he was stuck in the snow.

"Well, he will be back when the weather calms down."

Anna had a fever. She then ate as much porridge with milk and apples (in the form of a rabbit) in the room alone, she took the over-the-counter cold medicine that Kusanagi had prepared and fell asleep.

She had nightmares several times on the way, but she was able to sleep about four hours. Then when she changed the date, she woke up shivering with cold.

After all, it was quite painful for her to catch a cold without heating.

The wind was still blowing outside.

(Is it still snowing?), she thought.

When she Anna trembled and she began to wake up to cover herself more with the blanket...

"Sleeps peacefully."

She heard a familiar low-pitched voice and the area turned bright and warm.

Anna spoke in a cheerful voice while still being shy.

"Mikoto..."

Suoh stood up in warm light and warmth. And when he sat in a chair next to Anna's bed...

"In the heavy snow, when I managed to get back, Kusanagi told me to go ask for help. Anna, is there anything you want?"

Anna thought for a moment.

"Yes."

She wanted him to pamper her a little.

"Take my hand."

Suoh responded to Anna's request. Then he stayed until she fell asleep again.

The room was warm due to Suoh's presence. The next day, Anna woke up in good physical condition.

+++++

"Ah, no, that was the case too. How strange."

Yata, who couldn't finish even half and finally rolled up his sleeves, said as he yelled to himself as a group.

"But why did you suddenly talk about it?"

"I thought it was a bit like that."

Anna also responded with a bit of sweat on her fair skin. Now, even though it was an unprecedented hot day, the refrigerator broke and the HOMRA bar turned into a blazing inferno.

"It's similar?"

Yata said that with his tongue sticking out like a dog.

"Well, there is a difference between hot and cold, but is it physically tight?"

"I will never forget those days. The days when Mikoto and Tatara were here."

Anna closed her eyes and held her hands together. She smiled a little so could appreciate the precious memories of them.

"....."

Yata was silent for a while. Finally, Anna opened her eyes and said:

"Now I can do the same as Mikoto, but will you try? It will be like a tournament of patience."

She told Yata that he had fallen.

"Please forgive me."

Anna smiled.