

MINI EPISODES: GOLD SPECULATION

TRANSLATION: NARU-KUN / K-PROJECT WORLD

There is a lonely shadow in the "Sekiban no Ma", one of the rooms on the highest floors of the Mihashira Tower that can be found in Nanakamado.

The "Golden King" Kokujoji Daikaku. He has the power to rule Japan blindly and is the organizer of the Seven Kings system through the Dresden Slate.

Beneath his eyes, the pulsation of the stone bed embedded in the floor made him feel a slight shiver.

Right now, a human is in tune with the stone and is about to awaken as a "king".

The color that surrounds the stone pattern is...

("King Red")

Awakening of the third king who controls violence, as "that man" who erased the South Kanto region and flew away...

However, the battle of Daikaku has nothing to do with his nature. As the second king of destiny, a great event began to operate, because he felt the signal.

(If so, let's wake up in response to the Blue King)

The fourth king, the Blue King, who governs order, is a character who should be called a pair of the "Red King", and awakening also tended to be linked. Like a security device that stops the destruction of the Red King, the Blue King appears in front of him.

The two kings have repeatedly clashed at each scene in the past for various reasons, but uniformly in the world ruled by at least seven kings. And that crash has brought movements to the world. Good or bad.

(When there is stagnation, it breaks.)

Eight years have passed since the incident that caused the disappearance of multiple "kings" at once.

Once again, the world is trying to obtain the inequality of the central gear.

The previous awakening of the Red King ran to ruin, wondering all of that...

(That's where it stayed.)

Although he controls destiny, the Golden King cannot see everything in the future. Still, he was able to overlook fate insofar as he wanted a distant sky.

First of all, it was the dawn of the rope and the end of something.

Kokujoji recovers as the "Golden King" upon seeing the crossover and movement up to that point.

(Anyway, just do what you need to do.)

Raise a low voice to cut off all thoughts.

"Who!"

In response, one of his clan member rabbits put one knee on the edge of the room.

+++++++

In response to the main order, in the direction they pointed, two "rabbits", the royal units of the "Clinical House" of the Golden Clan, were running.

Kicking the roof of the building with shoe soles, the wind blows through their clothes, and heading towards a corner of Shizume-cho.

Beneath the mask spilled a cough that mimicked a rabbit.

"Beyond that, I cannot send a messenger to the Red King."

"At the moment, it looks like we are sieging behind us, and we are trying to push..."

The two who had been selected as pioneer messengers for the simple reason that they were the fastest among the people who packed the Mihashira tower, had a conversation during a mission that would not be possible.

"Don't hesitate. If the power of my hand is razed by the King, I don't think I ever have enough. Still, my opponent is the Red King."

"At the very least, I wish I had had time to check the records of how they responded to the previous generation."

He was open for a few seconds while searching for an answer.

"There are no specs. Because there are examples from its predecessors, it is quick action."

"Are you verbally trying to acknowledge the reality that he is one of the 'kings' on the Slate? Is such reasoning reasonable for the 'Red King'?"

Anxiety overflows like words, with the audience for the king controlling violence... As proud members of the "rabbits," they can't stop the conversation, as they realize such mercy.

It can't stop, but,

"Whether I know it or not, I have to. I have to."

"Yes."

At the very least, they can put their determination into the conversation.

There was a power signal exploding along the way.

With a bright red glow reminiscent of a flame.

Or a rabbit that is half a step ahead while feeling the impression of the sweetness of death.

"It's okay. In an emergency, request a messenger."

"I understand. Later again."

A rabbit that was halfway there. He stopped.

A giant, energetic crystal that mimicked a sword, like the messenger's determination, was forming with the King's symbol, the Sword of Damocles, pressing against the cloudy weather.

Everything went smoothly and without delay.

The new third king, the Red King, Suoh Mikoto, is ruthless on the brink of cruelty, without showing the color of rebellion, and as urged, ends the audience with the "Golden King" at the Mihashira Tower.

All of the explanations were heard by two young friends who had already received power as clan members, but were trivial compared to the uproar.

However,

After finishing the hearing, from one of the young people,

"Why are you wearing a rabbit mask?"

He felt that his waist was about to break when asked.

He could repair dignity and remain silent.

Yes, the Rabbit who became the messenger. he told his companions that they found him again.