

MINI EPISODES: IWA-SAN'S DAY OFF

TRANSLATION: NARU-KUN / K-PROJECT WORLD

Iwa-san likes to drink, but not as much as a heavy drinker. There are some people in the world like Uwabami who can drink as much as they want, but Iwa-san has a moderate amount of alcohol, and if he exceeds a certain level, he will usually drink liquor and the next day he will have a hangover and put an aspirin in his mouth with cold water while holding a sigh.

Members of the Green Clan have witnessed this type of scene many times.

Is the strength of sake a little stronger in ordinary adult men? On the other hand, he doesn't usually go upstairs, but when he goes to Iwa-san's liquor table, he pours sake in a red-painted cup, and Yukari, who doesn't get upset no matter how much she drinks, is essentially stronger.

However, Iwa-san loves liquor more than anyone. It's taste. It improves his mood when he gets drunk. It has a relaxing atmosphere to drink while talking to his friends. His favorite thing is beer, but he loves shochu, sake, and western liquor alike.

If Iwa-san was born in ancient China, he may have left many poems related to liquor for his posterity.

However, he recently celebrated a lot (celebrating the clan member's birthdays, winning the baseball team, and hitting the lottery for 500 yen), and so on.

As a result, he often gets drunk comfortably, and one day there was a case where a rat that nested in this underground facility ate the leftovers, while Iwa-san lay down by the table and fell asleep.

When Sukuna and Yukari, who had gotten up from their seats a bit, returned, a big fat rat leaned back like a little pet and looked at them adorably. When Sukuna yelled, "Waaah!", The rat ran away.

What was even scarier was that he was not at all concerned about this fuss because Nagare, who should have noticed for a long time, was immersed in the world of the internet. Yukari and Sukuna complained to Iwa-san.

"Iwa-san. It's nice to have a lot of celebrations, but haven't you been drinking too much lately?"

"So what if I have a day off?"

Iwa-san felt the nuance of "you're not young anymore" outside of them,

"Yes, rest day."

He thinks with my arms crossed. However, he wondered if there was something he was thinking about, and when he decided within three days, he really refused alcohol. Iwa-san is an unrivaled liquor lover, but he doesn't seem to depend on it, so it seems like it's not that difficult for him.

In addition, during the three days, he began to move his body taking advantage of the characteristics of the underground facility. He changed into a gray t-shirt and ran the slope that was originally supposed to be used as a waterway, hung from a steel pole, and conversely put his foot there to reach his abs. It surprised both Yukari and Sukuna that Iwa-san had an extremely lean and muscular body.

After a period as stated, Iwa-san celebrated with everyone, opened the beer can, poured it down his throat, and took a deep breath. He asked, laughing because the water was cloudy.

"Iwa-san, how were your days off?"

"Oh, not bad. I'll do it regularly from now on."

"Oh."

"That's great, Iwa-san."

Both Sukuna and Yukari were impressed. Iwa-san looked at his friends and finally laughed.

"Oh, then the beer will taste better."